

Unicef Rights of the Child

Article 17

Every Child has the right to reliable information from the media that they can understand. They have the right to be protected from materials that could harm them.

Longwill Focus on E-Safety Autumn A 2017

How internet aware are you?

Do you know what these apps and websites are?

Do you know their age limits?

None of these apps and sites are appropriate for children under the age of 13.

If your child is using apps for gaming or social media and you want more information, the NSPCC have a very helpful website called 'Net aware'

(www.net-aware.org.uk) There is a link on the Longwill school website to this and other useful websites about online safety.

E-Safety tip of the term:

Kiddle

Google is by far the most recognisable search engine, but did you know that there are more child-friendly options?

Kiddle looks like Google, works like Google, but has more filters in place to make it a safer browser for your child to use.

Find it at: www.kiddle.co and save it as a favourite.

Roblox

We are aware that this particular gaming site is very popular among children at Longwill. The official age for this site is 8 years old, but there are risks involved.

There is a chat option and the ability to 'add' friends. We would strongly encourage you to talk to your children about only adding their real-life friends and supervise them closely.
